The year is already more than halfway over, but it continues to be very good for exchange-traded funds.

U.S. ETFs took in a total net inflow of $117 billion in July 2024 — the second-highest monthly total on record, according to Morningstar Direct, and only the fourth time monthly flows topped $100 billion.

The July figure fell short of the $128 billion that ETFs collected in December 2023 but surpassed the $102 billion inflow in March.

July has historically been a strong month for ETF inflows, according to Morningstar Direct — over the past 15 years, July inflows saw an average 1.14% increase in new investments.

Month to month, the latest numbers mark a significant jump. Last month's figures represent a whopping 42% increase over June inflows to U.S. ETFs. The June inflows of $82.4 billion were not quite as strong as in May, when U.S. ETFs took in $87.1 billion — a new record for the fifth month of the year.

Which ETFs took in the most cash last month? Scroll through the cardshow below to see the 20 funds with the biggest inflows of July 2024. All data is from Morningstar Direct and is current as of Aug. 2, 2024.
